CHITTENANGO FALLS.

The first society event of the season and one of the most fashionable weddings that has taken place here was the marriage of Edward L. Eldridge of Manlius, to Miss Hattie E. Wormuth of this place on Wednesday of last week. The wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents which was handsomely decorated with ferns, potted plants and running vines. The arch under which the bridal party stood was of ferns and clematis which gave the room a most charming appearance. Promptly at 8 o'clock to the sweet strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party entered the room. The groom and his best man, Charles Reynolds of this place, led the procession, followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Emma Berry of Syracuse, and Homer Reynolds, brother of the best man. Miss Alice Eldridge, sister of the groom, attended the bride who was leaning on the arm of her father. The procession moved to the west end of the parlor where they were met by Rev. Mr. Lyons of New Woodstock, who performed the ceremony, after which the guests repaired to the dining room where a repast was served during which choice music was rendered by Miss Jessie Sherwood of Cazenovia. The bride was becomingly attired in a robe of white silk with demi-train, trimmed with fine lace, and carried a silver and white Bible presented by the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge will make a southern trip of considerable extent and on their return will reside in this place. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents which testify to the esteem in which she was held. A reception will be given at the home of the groom's parents on their return November 6.

About thirty of our young people gave Miss Susie Scott a pleasant surprise party on Tuesday evening. They all report a fine time.

RIPE OLD AGE.

Mrs. Emma Barnes, of Wabash Avenue, 95 Years Old To-day.

Older than the century itself, Mrs. Emma Barnes, of this city, refers to events of her childhood as though they occurred but yesterday. Having, five years ago, passed the four score years and ten, she to-day recalls incidents that came to her notice seventy or eighty years ago with greater clearness than events of a month or a year ago. She long since ceased to blushingly confess that she was past 16, and yesterday, with a pardonable degree of pride, informed a representative of THE FREE PRESS that she would be 95 years old to-day.

She was born at Appledore, Kent Co., Eng., April 12, 1797, and came to America with her husband, Thomas Barnes, in 1827. Mr. Barnes was a prominent painter and decorator at Syracuse, N. Y., from that time until his death in 1855. Soon after her husband's death Mrs. Barnes moved to Detroit, where she has lived ever since in the midst of a happy home circle.

"I was in hopes," she said good-naturedly, when introduced to THE FREE PRESS representative yesterday, "that you had come to tell me that somebody in England had died and left me a large fortune. If you put anything in the paper about me make it as short as possible, for I never liked to see my name in print. There is nothing in connection with my life that is worthy of note, except that it has been a remarkably long one and that my health is still good. I don't comprehend things as quickly as I used to; my hearing is not as good as it was, and my eyesight has failed me somewhat. This winter, for the first time in my life, I have not been able to read by lamplight."

Mrs. Barnes makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Annie M. Beebe, 962 Wabash avenue. She has two other children living—William, at Auburn, N. Y., and James, at Washington, D. C. She has always been domestic in her tastes, and never happier than when at home surrounded by members of her family. There are four generations assembled under the roof of the Beebe residence. Mrs. Barnes has three great-great-grandchildren, twenty great grandchildren and twenty grandchildren. She has never ceased to take a deep interest in the affairs of her mother country, and not a day passes that she does not scan the newspapers carefully, eagerly perusing every item relating to Old England.

"I have lived," she said yesterday, "during the reigns of four British sovereigns—George III., George IV., William IV. and Queen Victoria. When I came to the United States John Quincy Adams was President."

The only distinguished American Mrs. Barnes remembers having seen in her younger days is Gen. Cass, whom she saw frequently after coming to Detroit.

Mrs. F. W. Moe, a granddaughter, will give a reception in honor of Mrs. Barnes' birthday at her residence, 425 Lincoln avenue, to-day from 3 to 6 p. m.

NEARLY A CENTURY.

Mrs. Barns in Good Health at the Age of 97 Years.

Mrs. Emma Barns has been stricken by paralysis and is helpless. She is in her 97th year, being the oldest person at present living in Detroit, and among the oldest residents of the city. In spite of her recent affliction her general health is good, and the chances are that she will linger until her life has encompassed a century of years.

There are in the family upward of 60 great great, great and grand children.

Mrs. Barns' life is remarkable for nothing save her extreme age and the excellent health which she has always enjoyed. Her marriage, the death of her husband, the birth of her first great great grandchild are the three events of her existence. Her memory is good, but her sight and hearing are failing fast. A number of small children are in the house with her but their prattle and juvenile capers do not disturb her in the least. She is their favorite, and never seemed so happy, before her affliction, than when she was among the little ones.

FOURSCORE AND TEN.

Mrs. Emma Barns, the Celebration of Whose 90th Birthday Recalls Recollections of Early Detroit.

The persons are so few to whom it is given to live a score of years beyond the span which is set by Biblical authority for the life of man, that when, in these days, one meets a person born before the opening of the century, it is with feelings of great interest not unmixed with a subtler sensation, which is more than curiosity and less, perhaps, than awe which arises from thoughts of the many things that that person has seen with the eye of sense which, to the great multitude, are matters of history and tradition. This feeling is strengthened, when years have dealt kindly with mind and body and one stands in the presence of an active intelligence supported by vigorous memory.

Mrs. Emma Barns, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Annie M. Beebe, at 912 Wabash avenue, and will be readily identified when it is stated that she was the mother of the late Henry Barns, one of the founders and for many years editor of the Detroit Tribune, on the 12th of this month celebrated her 90th birthday at the residence of George B. Simons, 24 Brainard street, Mrs. Simons being her granddaughter.

A FREE PRESS reporter yesterday called at Mr. Simons' residence and Mrs. Barns, who came briskly down stairs, consented to give a few particulars of her life, although evidently averse to publicity.

"My name was never in the paper but once," she said, "and that was when I was married. Please make it as short as you can.

"I was born in the County of Kent, England, April 12, 1797. There I grew up and married Thomas Barns, who was a painter and paperhanger by trade. We remained in England until 1826 when, with our five children, we sailed for America, arriving in New York after one of the long voyages common in those days.

"We first stopped at Oriskany, N. Y., for one year and then removed to Syracuse. There my husband obtained work at his trade and, after a time, embarked in business for himself. In this he prospered and I am sure that no one who ever lived in Syracuse was more respected or better deserved it.

"We had eight children, all of whom grew to maturity. Thomas died in Syracuse and the others married and settled in different places. Five of them came to Detroit—Henry, who was in the same business that you are; John, for many years a baker here; Annie M., (Beebe) with whom I now live; Mary and Emma, each of whom was twice married—both now dead. Aside from Mrs. Beebe I have two living children—William, who lives in Auburn, N. Y., and James, who is in the Department of the Interior at Washington.

"My husband died in 1854 and I came at once to Detroit, where I lived with my son John until his death, and since have lived with Mrs. Beebe."

"How many grandchildren have you, Mrs. Barns?" asked the reporter.

"I was counting them this morning, and find that I have eighteen living. Several are dead."

"And great grandchildren?"

"Oh, don't ask me that," said she, laughing. "That is something I cannot tell you. There are so many of them—many that I have never seen and shall never live to see."

There was a moment of silence, when Mrs. Barns said, with a bright little smile that seems characteristic of her:

"I don't know, but I ought to tell you, as you are from THE FREE PRESS, that I am a Republican to the backbone, as was my husband."

"You seem to hear readily?"

"As well as I ever could, and I sew, do fancy work and read to occupy my time.—With my glasses I read readily by gaslight."

"Yes," said Mrs. Simons, "and she sits at the window without glasses and reads the names on the delivery wagons which pass, even the small letters, without trouble."

"Some one came about a short time ago, selling needles," said Mrs. Barns, "and I found fault because the needles were too coarse. The woman said:

"'Perhaps you are getting your second sight.'

"'No,' said I, 'I never lost my first.'"

The reporter then took his leave, followed by a parting injunction to "say as little as possible in the paper."

This sweet faced, cheery old lady, with a vigor of body equal to that of many twenty years her junior and a brightness of mind almost youthful, living happy in the ministration of children living—already old men and women: happy, too, in the memory of children dead, who have been, as she says, "an honor and a blessing to her"—it is hard to appreciate that her life takes root in the eighteenth century; that she was alive when John Adams was elected President of the United States and when Napoleon was making his great Austrian campaign; that she was a year old when Nelson won the battle of the Nile and overthrew the Egyptian expedition on which the Little Corporal had built so many ambitions; a year older when Washington died and a bonnie lass of 15 when from what was then her country the armies came out in 1812 destined to capture the place which is now her home.

A LEADING CITIZEN DEAD.

George Barnes Died In New York Today--Story of His Successful Life.

George Barnes, one of the leading business men of this city, died this morning about 2 o'clock at the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York. He reached New York from Europe on the 10th inst. by the Aurania. He had caught a severe cold on the ship, which settled into a slight attack of pneumonia. He was taken to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where he sank rapidly. Last evening it was thought that he was rallying and would be able to be brought home, but what the physicians say was heart failure seized Mr. Barnes in the night, and at 2 o'clock he died. Locomotor attaxia, from which he had suffered for a number of years, is thought to have had nothing to do with hastening death. Mrs. Barnes and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hiscock, were with Mr. Barnes when he died. The remains will reach this city this evening. Burial will probably be on Wednesday.

George Barnes was born of strictly English parentage on October 1st, 1827, at Tenterden, a small town in the County of Kent, England. His parents were James and Sarah Barnes, old residents of that portion of England and of the very best of stock. After attaining such an age as to be able to attend school, he spent the time till he arrived at the age of twelve years in the common district school. At this time he had developed sufficiently so that he was given a place as office boy by Joseph Munn, a lawyer in Tenterden. He remained with the gentleman for two years when, at the age of fourteen years, he left home and came to this city with simply the blessing of his parents.

Mr. Barnes arrived here in the year 1841, in charge of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. David Ogsawell, then prominent citizens of Syracuse. The boy, as he was, took an interest in building matters and decided to learn the mason's trade, in the meantime living with his uncle. He began laying brick for the first time on a dwelling where the residence of Jacob Crouse now stands on East Genesee street, near University avenue. The work proved pretty hard for the young boy, and his hands, which were soft and tender, often bled from handling the rough bricks. The house was to be the property of Aaron Burt, who took considerable interest in young Barnes. He told him that he was capable of doing better work than that of laying brick and offered to assist him in getting a more lucrative position. This offer, coming from such a kindly source, was quickly accepted by the young man and in a few days he was installed in the law office of John Wilkinson, father of Alfred and J. Forman Wilkinson, then located in the building where the old Central station used to stand.

He acted as general office boy and every spare moment he was out watching the moving of trains on the Central road, in which he became very much interested and which he kept up till he developed into a railroad man. He assisted the ticket agent and baggageman and sometimes ran as an extra conductor from here to Utica. He finally had charge of some of the company's important books. All of this time he had been studying everything about the road, even to the track and minor appointments.

He was rewarded for his faithfulness and appointed as superintendent of the road on the Utica & Syracuse division in 1853, at the age of twenty-six years. While engaged in the railroad business he also was dealing in real estate with the little fortune that he had got together and started in to develop the Fourth ward, which was then for the greater part a useless swamp. People thought that he was crazy and some tried to dissuade him from his purpose, but he persevered and some of the finest residences in the ward are standing on land that was developed under his direction. At the time of the consolidation of the various railroads between Albany and Buffalo, now the New York Central, he sold a quantity of stock that he had and resigned his position as superintendent.

In 1854 Mr. Barnes went into the nursery business, being one of the firm known as Barnes, Phelps & Putnam, and at this time he was also engaged in the lumber business, being a partner in the firm of Cogswell & Barnes, now known as George H. McChesney & Company. He followed this business actively till in 1856 when he accepted the superintendency of the Marietta & Cincinnati railroad, then under process of construction in Ohio. He only held this position for a short time when he found that it did not tend toward the welfare of his business here, so he sold out his home business to his partners and continued in the railroad business, to which he had become very much attached.

He held his position for a year and a half, when, owing to the poverty of the country and other reverses of the road, he resigned and returned to Syracuse.

In a short time, the fore part of 1858, Mr. Barnes purchased an interest in the Central City bank and was soon after appointed cashier. In the early years of the war the bank made some loans to gun contractors in the East and became involved, finally causing liquidation. Mr. Barnes had, previous to this, bought an interest in the firm of Sweet Brothers & Company, who had but just organized a shop for the manufacture of mowing machine knives. Mr. Barnes quickly identified himself with the management of the company which met with various and fluctuating successes.

In 1864 the firm was reorganized and became Sweet, Barnes & Company. This was a stock company and Mr. Barnes became manager with William A. Sweet. The new company met with surprising success and eventually Mr. Sweet purchased one-half of the buildings and started the manufacture of steel, and the present Sweet Manufacturing company was formed. Mr. Barnes retained the other half of the works and formed the firm of George Barnes & Company. They were successful and increased their business of manufacturing mowing machines immensely. This was one of three manufactories of the kind in the United States, the two others being located at Fitchburgh, Mass., and Akron, O., conducted by A. Whitman.

In 1876 all three of these manufactories were merged under one head and called the Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing company with Mr. Barnes at the head of the concern, which has remained the same up to this date.

Mr. Barnes has been president of the Trust and Deposit company, and was one of the original incorporators of the Onondaga County Savings bank, and of which he was a trustee. He has been president of the State bank and was one of the trustees of the Onondaga Orphan asylum and also a trustee of the Syracuse Chilled Plow company.

Mr. Barnes was always a Republican in politics and took an active part in the political interests of his party. He was nominated for Mayor in the winter of 1882, but was defeated at the polls by John Demong, Democrat, by a majority of sixty-eight out of a total vote of 8,504.

During the last ten years Mr. Barnes has travelled a great deal. In 1886 his rapidly falling health made it necessary for him to go to Europe to consult with the leading physicians there. All that human skill could do was summoned to his aid, but without avail

The mother had just left the room, saying good-night, as she walked across the hall to her own room, when the accident occurred. Dr. Arthur Tillepaugh was summoned. Concussion of the brain caused her death. The funeral will be held from the residence of her son-in-law, Charles S. Johnson, at 415 Lodi street.

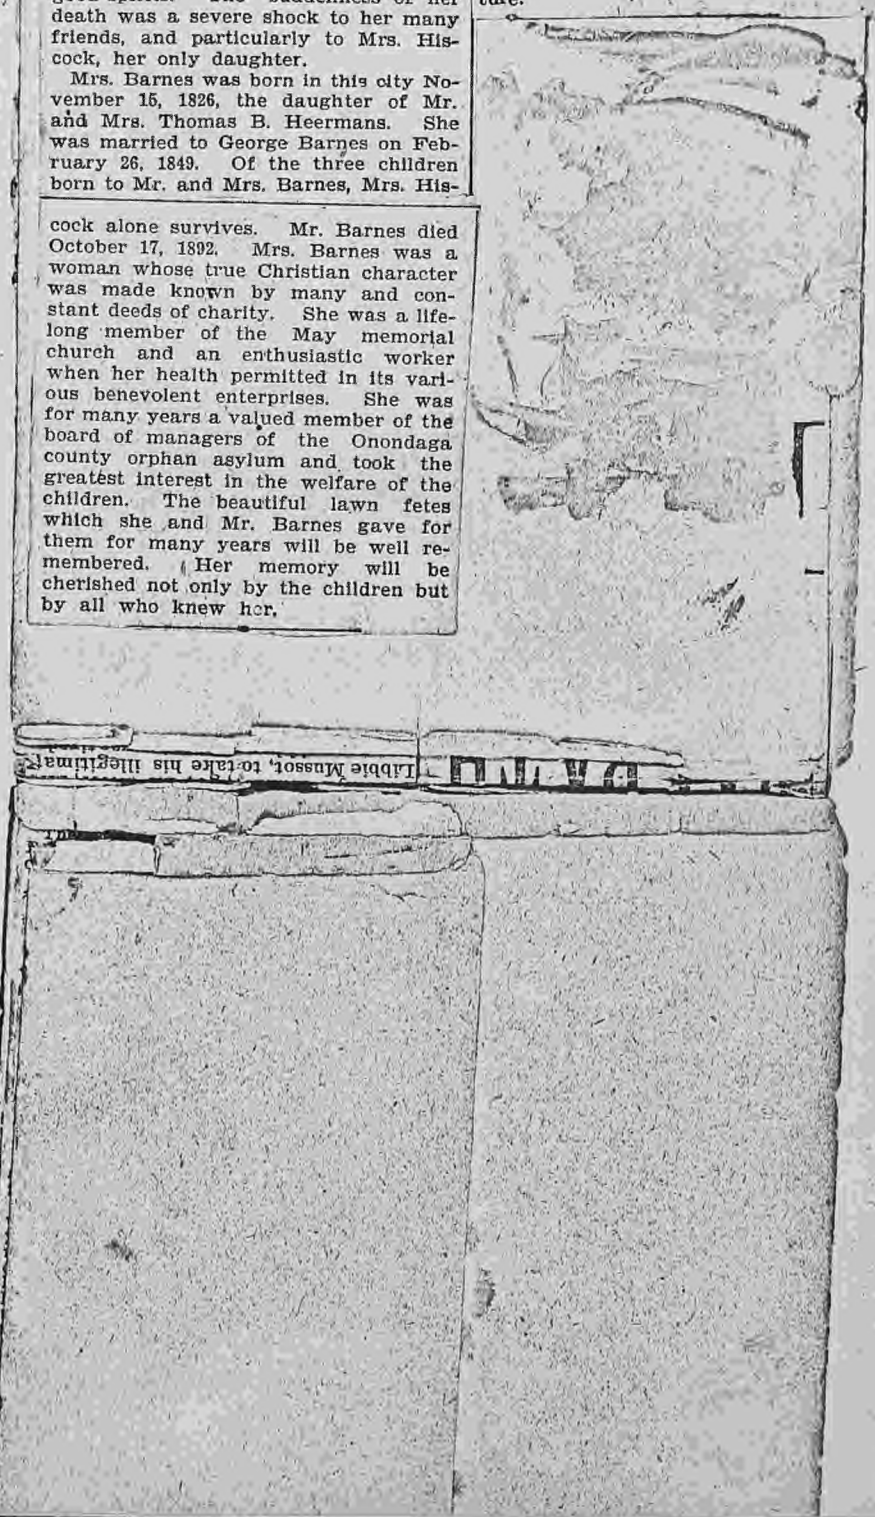
DEATH OF MRS. REBECCA BARNES

A Noble Christian Woman Passes Away Unexpectedly.

The death of Mrs. Rebecca S. Barnes, widow of the late George Barnes, which occurred suddenly Wednesday morning at her home on James street hill, has occasioned deep and widespread sorrow. Mrs. Barnes had been an invalid for several years from tuberculosis, but had not been failing noticeably of late. A severe hemorrhage, however, came upon her without warning shortly after 8 o'clock. Medical assistance was sent for at once, but before a doctor could arrive Mrs. Barnes had passed away. On Tuesday afternoon she had been assisting her daughter, Mrs. Frank H. Hiscock, at a guild tea upon the lawn about Mrs. Hiscock's home. Her social exertions did not seem to tire her and she retired in apparent good spirits. The suddenness of her death was a severe shock to her many friends, and particularly to Mrs. Hiscock, her only daughter.

Mrs. Barnes was born in this city November 15, 1826, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Heermans. She was married to George Barnes on February 26, 1849. Of the three children born to Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. Hiscock alone survives. Mr. Barnes died October 17, 1892. Mrs. Barnes was a woman whose true Christian character was made known by many and constant deeds of charity. She was a lifelong member of the May memorial church and an enthusiastic worker when her health permitted in its various benevolent enterprises. She was for many years a valued member of the board of managers of the Onondaga county orphan asylum and took the greatest interest in the welfare of the children. The beautiful lawn fetes which she and Mr. Barnes gave for them for many years will be well remembered. Her memory will be cherished not only by the children but by all who knew her.

The plans of the 1911 class of Fayetteville high school for the coming year are somewhat varied, yet all the members are aspiring for a higher training and some will adopt the more modern lines of business pursuits. Emmet O'Brien and Paul Gaugel will spend a year at Sheffield Scientific School in preparation for entrance to Yale School of Forestry. Edwarda Collin and Lucille Hale will take a post-graduate in preparation for a Domestic Science course at Pratt Institute; Geneva Taylor and Laura Benedict will become school teachers; Anna Riorden will enter the Women's and Children's Hospital; Sadie Creamer will enter Syracuse University and Herbert Coakley will take up the study of architecture.



A FATAL MIS-STEP

Mrs. Emily C. Paine Falls Down Stairs to Her Death.

VISITING AT JAMESVILLE

She Mistakes the Way to Her Room in the Kortright Hotel—Her Home in Syracuse.

A single mis-step in the dark was the cause of a terrible accident which resulted in the almost instant death of Mrs. Emily C. Paine of this city, at the Kortright Hotel at Jamesville at 11 o'clock Saturday night. Mrs. Paine was the wife of Richard Paine, for many years a resident of this city and until his health failed him a few years ago, actively engaged in business here. Nearly a year ago Mr. Paine was critically ill but recovered sufficiently so that when the recent hot weather came he was able to go with his wife to the Jamesville Hotel where he was improving rapidly. When in the city they have lived for some time past in the Hier flats in a suite of rooms adjoining those of their son, Charles H. Paine, who has been for a number of years a bookkeeper in the Onondaga County Savings bank. The son went to Jamesville on Saturday afternoon to remain over yesterday and occupied a room across the hall from that assigned to his parents. Mrs. Paine spent the evening until about 11 o'clock with her son in his room and then saying good night, started to go to her own. In crossing the hall she probably became confused in the darkness and instead of proceeding straight to her room, walked toward the stairs, before she realized where she was, stepping off and was thrown with great force to the bottom of the flight.

The noise occasioned by the fall and her outcries, aroused those within the hotel and brought her immediate assistance. When reached she was found to be breathing but unconscious and Dr. Arthur Tillepaugh, whose office is within a few doors of the hotel, was speedily summoned. Upon his response it was ascertained that Mrs. Paine had received a number of severe blows upon the head and was suffering from concussion of the brain. She was beyond medical aid and died within a few minutes.

Undertaken M. Ryan was notified of the accident and yesterday drove to Jamesville and conveyed the body to the residence of her son-in-law, Charles B. Johnson at No. 415 Lodi street from which place the funeral will be held at a time not yet announced. Mrs. Paine was 56 years old.

With a burglar on one side of his cell and a colored offender on the other, Charles H. Paine, the defaulting teller of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, is locked up in a cell in the basement of the Court House, to which he was led yesterday morning after spending two days in the Empire House under guard of Deputy Sheriff Fred Bratzer.

Paine pleaded guilty yesterday morning in County Court before Judge William M. Ross on the advice of his lawyer, Donald F. McLennan. At first he pleaded not guilty to several of the charges made in the indictments against him by the March Grand Jury.

Unable to Get Bondsmen.

As it was impossible to find bondsmen to go his bail in the sum of $10,000, it was decided to take him from the hotel to the cell and have him arraigned immediately. He will be sentenced on or before Friday, June 22.

Paine did not seem to worry much over the result of his troubles and he passed the entire afternoon sitting outside his cell in the corridor visiting with his wife and lawyer and Jailer John Sleeth as a neutral observer.

At 10 o'clock he was brought into the court room, when he entered pleas of not guilty to each indictment. These bills charged the stealing of $850, $600, $850 and $500 on February 19 and 20. Three were for grand larceny in the first degree and one in the second degree.

Had About $800.

Attorney A. M. Birdsall of New York, representing the bonding company which bonded Paine, was present in court and received all the money Paine had brought back with him from Norway, which is said to have amounted to about

A petition is being circulated by the friends of Charles H. Paine, the defaulting teller of the Onondaga County Savings Bank, who is now locked up in a Court House cell awaiting sentence, asking the judge to show clemency to the young man.

Paine's lawyer, Donald F. McLennan, leaves the city this morning on business and he stated yesterday that nothing new was to be said in regard to Paine's case, which will be disposed of on Friday.

Paine spent a lonely day yesterday, having no callers.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-STANDARD.

AUBURN, June 24.—Former Teller C. H. Paine of the Onondaga County Savings Bank is confined in a cell in the north wing of the prison. He is employed in the sorting department of the broom shop and has made such good progress that he will soon be promoted to weaving baskets. If he obeys the prison rules he will be advanced to a clerical position in the course of time, it being the custom of the prison officials to keep the convicts at work most suited to their tastes providing they are "trusties."

The officials report that Paine has thus far been a model convict, is faithful and apparently resigned to his fate.

CLERKS IN STORE HERE WED, TO LIVE ON RANCH IN TEXAS

H. J. Cooper and Miss Stallknecht Kept Engagement Secret Until Day Before Marriage—Leave for South Immediately After Ceremony.

Saturday Mar 24

After having kept their engagement a secret for more than six months, Harold J. Cooper and Miss Katherine Stallknecht were married by Rev. Murray Shipley Howland at the South Presbyterian Church early Saturday afternoon.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple went to the New York Central station, where with the bride's family, they left for Harlington, Tex. They are to live on a ranch owned by Mrs. Cooper's brother.

Miss Stallknecht sang in the choir of the South Presbyterian Church and she and Mr. Cooper were in the same Sunday school class. Through his father, Arthur W. Cooper, head of the engraving department at H. J. Howe's store in South Salina street, Mr. Cooper obtained a position at the store and a few weeks later his fiancee also went to work there. They were engaged at that time, but they didn't let anybody know about it.

Employes of the store noticed that Mr. Cooper and Miss Stallknecht usually went to lunch together and left the store together in the evening, but no one seemed to attach any significance to that.

In the meantime the young people had carefully laid plans for the wedding and the trip to Texas. The bride's mother, Mrs. Emma Stallknecht, and her sister, Ethel, were also to make the trip south, but they kept their plans well guarded, too, for fear of betraying the engagement.

On Friday morning Mr. Cooper told Charles H. Howe that he was going to leave the store the following day and that he and Miss Stallknecht were to be married. When they left for the West Saturday afternoon the entire choir of the South Church and many of their former fellow employes were at the station to bid them good-by.

At Grace Church, Cortland, on Wednesday at 2 p. m. occurred the marriage of Charles Henry Owen of Trumansburg, N. Y., and Ethel Irene Walrath of this village. In Memoriam

Last Sunday afternoon after a brief illness Hobart Van Alstyne, one of the best known and highly respected residents of the village, passed away. His many friends were greatly shocked to learn of his sudden death. He was taken ill on Friday afternoon while attending to his duties at the Golf grounds of which he had but lately assumed the charge. He was able to reach his home but was so exhausted and weak that medical aid was speedily summoned. It was found that the disease had made such rapid progress that an operation was an immediate necessity. The operation was performed but it was soon seen that all human aid was of no avail and he passed away, surrounded by those who, as far as possible, had ministered to the loved one. His end was peaceful and painless.

Deceased was born in this village and it has been his home practically all his life. Early in life he learned the cigar-maker's trade. Later he entered the employ of Bangs & Gaynor. In 1887 he was united in marriage with Miss Lettie Call of Fayetteville.

In 1888 he began his professional baseball career in which he attained an enviable reputation as a skillful player. His first engagement was with the Syracuse Stars. He was a member of a number of teams, during his baseball experiences and in all this time his associates were almost unanimous in their expressions of respect and esteem regarding him.

He was a member of Limestone Creek Lodge No. 145, I. O. O. F., also of the Rebekah Lodge No. 314 of this village. Funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon and the large number present evidenced the regard in which he was held. He is survived by his wife, two children, Berice and Hobart, a mother, Mrs. Sarah Van Alstyne of Ilion, N. Y., three sisters Mrs. Cora Davis and Mrs. Charles Belding of Fayetteville, Mrs. W. W. Gay of Ilion and two brothers, William of East Albany and Sheldon of Ilion. Interment was made in the Fayetteville cemetery.

The arch under which the bridal party stood was of ferns and clematis which gave the room a most charming appearance. Promptly at 8 o'clock to the sweet strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party entered the room. The groom and his best man, Charles Reynolds of this place, led the procession, followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Emma Berry of Syracuse, and Homer Reynolds, brother of the best man. Miss Alice Eldridge, sister of the groom, attended the bride who was leaning on the arm of her father. The procession moved to the west end of the parlor where they were met by Rev. Mr. Lyons of New Woodstock, who performed the ceremony, after which the guests repaired to the dining room where a repast was served during which choice music was rendered by Miss Jessie Sherwood of Cazenovia. The bride was becomingly attired in a robe of white silk with demi-train, trimmed with fine lace, and carried a silver and white Bible presented by the groom. He is survived by his widow, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Burt.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Rachael D. Burt died of congestion of the lungs in Fayetteville, N. Y., Dec 8th, 1900, aged 83 years. Four children survive her, Mrs. Julia A. Thompson, of Gibbon, Neb; Mrs. Angie L. Benedict, of Fayetteville, N. Y.; Lemuel W. Burt, of South Onondaga, N. Y; Samuel W. Burt, of North East, Pa. One daughter, Delia Burt, died about two years ago in Springfield, Mass.

Mrs. Burt was formerly of Otisco and lived there for many years. She was a woman highly respected by all who knew her—amiable in disposition, cheerful in temperament, always having a kind word for everybody. Intellectually she was bright and cheery. Had she been liberally educated when young, she would have made her mark in the world as a thinker and a writer. With the culture which she had gained by reading and observation, she had acquired a very easy, fluent style. She enjoyed wielding the pen in writing letters to friends, and in articles for print. The TULLY TIMES occasionally had an article from her pen.

Mrs. Burt was a good citizen, an excellent neighbor, a faithful wife, an affectionate mother and liberal to the poor. As a christian woman, she was true as steel, a member of the Congregational church for more than forty years. The bible was her daily light, and Jesus Christ her only hope of salvation. She lived to a ripe old age, and seemed as young in spirit when past 80 years, as she did in her youth. In her case how true and appropriate the scripture passage, "Thou shalt go to thy grave in full age, like as a shock cometh in his season." "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness."

Her remains were buried in Maple Grove cemetery by the side of her husband, there to await the arch-angel trump when the dead in Christ shall rise first. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints, I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

BIRTHS.

DE LAND—On the 16th inst., at No. 918 Columbus avenue, to George and Minnie De Land, a son.

MRS. BERGER A SYRACUSAN

The Wife of the Victim of the Kansas City Murder Belongs to a Well Known Family Here.

Local interest in the killing of Dr. L. A. Berger of Kansas City, who was shot by John Schlegel on July 8, is aroused through the relationship of the victim's wife to well known people in Syracuse. When the news was first telegraphed to The Standard it was stated in the dispatch that Mrs. Berger was formerly Mrs. Eldon of Syracuse, N. Y. The Syracuse Herald, commenting on this news, said a blunder had been made in confounding Syracuse, Kan., or Syracuse, Ind., with Syracuse, N. Y. It turns out that Mrs. Berger was a resident of Syracuse. Her maiden name was Emma Gardner and she was the niece of the late George Gardner, for many years the sexton of Oakwood cemetery. She was one of several sisters, all of whom were famous for their beauty in Syracuse 30 years ago. Mrs. Berger was first married to a man named Eldon, a resident of a western city, about 1874. In 1889 she married Dr. Berger in Kansas City. She has four daughters.

Dr. Berger was killed by Schlegel, according to the murderer's statement, in revenge for having outraged his wife. The crime was committed, so he says, while Mrs. Schlegel was visiting the doctor's office for medical treatment. The Kansas City newspapers have published extended accounts of the murder and with all of them there is evident a belief that Dr. Berger was innocent. Schlegel is set down as having been insanely and unwarrantedly jealous.

Mrs. Berger is quoted as saying that she was aware of Schlegel's mania, inasmuch as Dr. Berger had frequently spoken of it. He had often said he would prefer not to be called by the Schlegels, because the husband always seemed to distrust him.

The Kansas City newspapers seem agreed that Mrs. Schlegel is now insisting she was outraged, in order to make a defense for her husband. Mrs. Schlegel's published story is inconsistent in many particulars. She says the outrage was committed in the daytime in Dr. Berger's office, yet she made no outcry, and for some time made no [illegible] of what had happened.

Hollington-Ralph.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening when William Hollington and Georgia Ralph were united in marriage by the Rev. Mr. Vassar, at the home of the bride's brother in Cortland avenue. They were attended by Miss Nettie Haylor and James Hollington, brother of the groom. The bride was prettily dressed in white silk trimmed with lace. At the conclusion of the ceremony congratulations were extended and a wedding luncheon was served, after which the happy couple departed for a wedding journey to New York city and Binghamton. They will be at home to their friends after November 1st. They received many beautiful presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful gold watch. The guests who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr and Mrs. Richard Ralph of Fayetteville Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Hollington, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ralph, Mr. and Mrs. George Hale, jr., of Manlius, Mr. and Mrs. Alber Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. William Girvin, Mrs Isabella Kerr, Mrs. Ellen Parker of Fayetteville, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mahley of Coffeeville, Kan., Miss Nettie Haylor, James Hollington, Albert Hollington, Mr. and Mrs Mateland Cate of Solvay, Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Funeral Services of Albert H. Weld.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the appreciative friends of Albert H. Weld of Wooddale, Del., gathered in his now desolate home and in tender sympathy with his bereaved family, and deep and silent respect for the sweet, true life gone out, listened to the loving tribute paid to his character by his friend Jas. B. Elliott, of Phila., and the comforting words of truth from the lips of Rev. Wm. J. Phillips of the Church of Humanity of that city. Feeling that many who were unable to be present, owing to the unfavorable hour and the weather, will heartily coincide with the spirit of the tribute by Mr. Elliott, we gratefully present it to your readers as follows:

In the presence of these solemnly closed eyes, these pulseless hands, these voiceless lips, I come to speak as some day, I wish that one will speak for me, telling the truth of life and death!

The trust of the dead is very sacred.

There is but one thing equally so—and that is the trust of a little child. The supreme sacredness of both rests in their helplessness.

Therefore the highest principles of honor demand that in nothing shall we disobey the wish of him who is powerless now, as all of us shall one day be, to say if wrong be done his memory.

It was his wish that some person who knew and understood his principles should speak a few words before the last farewell.

He was my friend; he will remain so. The dead are true.

He who lies here, clothed with the perfect peace of death, was a kind and loving father, a generous neighbor and an honest man. And these words build a monument of glory above the humble grave. With him immortality was the eternal consequence of his own acts.

He believed that every pure thought, every disinterested deed, hastens the harvest of universal good. This religion enriches poverty and enable us to bear the saddest sorrows of life.

He needed no creed. He faced the burdens and responsibilities of life, seeking to throw none of the weight which was his upon others. So he went out fearlessly into the great darkness of death, in perfect faith that whether it were a long eternal sleep or whether light lay beyond he had done his best here and needed no one upon whom to cast his failures.

The mystery of death we cannot understand.

The golden bridge of life from gloom emerges, and on shadow rests; beyond this we do not know.

We love, we wait and we hope.

Upon the tenderest heart the deepest blows fall.

All paths, whether filled with thorns or flowers, end here.

Here success and failure are the same.

The rag of wretchedness and the purple robe of power—all difference and distinction—are lost in the democracy of death.

Character alone survives.

Mr. Weld was always hopeful, busy, just, cheerful, filled with a spirit of reform. Loving and gentle in his family, hospitable, judging men and women, regardless of wealth, position or public clamor, and as reliable as the attraction of gravitation. Such a man was Albert H. Weld, one of the staunchest soldiers that ever faced and braved for freedom's sake, the wrath and scorn and lies of place and power.

Farewell, dear friend, the world is better for your life; the world is braver for your death. Farewell, we loved you living, we love you now.

In Memoriam.

The following lines were written by a friend, in memory of Miss Ida Bates, who died at Collamer May 22, 1891, aged 25 years.

Now the flowers again appear on the earth,
And nature seems all bright and gay;
But our hearts are broken—we see naught but dearth,
In this beautiful month of May.

We believe our Father is mighty to save.
With patience we're trying to know
The mysteries of life, of death and the grave,
Oh! why are we bewildered so?

But God in his mercy knows best what is right,
All things work together for good.
But we fail to understand this dark, cruel blight;
Yet it may not be best that we should.

The silent old Reaper, with his mystic blade,
Leaves never a sheaf still unshorn;
But he found our dear Ida was not afraid,
Though none ere return from that bourne.

Gracefully, peacefully, her spirit has fled
From its beautiful house of clay,
Now we say in our hearts, she is not dead;
She has gone with the Angels away.

Through tears, we can view the work left partly done,
And ask for grace to wear this heavy cross;
Through faith we see the crown our Ida has won;
Divinely helped, we meekly bear our loss.

The Rev. Charles Vickery Is Survivor of the Torpedoed Oranso.

Photographs of the Rev. C. R. Vickery of Manlius in the "Y" uniform have just been received by his friends. Mr. Vickery and Mr. Williams of Illinois, both survivors of the torpedoed Oransa, are in charge of the Y. M. C. A. warehouse in London. There tons of supplies are received daily and repacked and distributed to the more than forty American Y. M. C. A. camps and canteens throughout the United Kingdom.

The men preach on Sundays and work in Eagle hut evenings. Mr. Vickery has been preaching at one of the aviation camps.

On a recent Saturday night he went with a three-ton truck of supplies to a camp nearly 80 miles away. They traveled part of the night, slept on the truck, then in the morning journeyed on and were in time to stock the empty canteen before 5,000 Americans in khaki reached there, hungry, tired and homesick.

Death of Mr. James Law

On Tuesday morning, November 1, occurred the death of Mr. James Law, a well known and highly respected resident of this village. Death was due to acute Bright's disease from which he had suffered for many years.

Mr. Law was born in England fifty-four years ago, and came to America with his father in 1851, locating at Westmoreland. Two years later he moved to Vernon.

At the first call for volunteers in the Rebellion Mr. Law enlisted in the 117th Regiment, and went to the front. He served his adopted country bravely during the entire war and at its close he received an honorable discharge.

He returned to Vernon after the war and there married Miss Adaline Martin, of that place. In 1870 he moved to Fayetteville where he has since resided.

Mr. Law was an industrious, Christian man, whom to know was to respect and love. Faithful in all his Christian duties and earnest in his purposes, he served his God as he had served his country—well. He was the honored superintendent of the M. E. Sunday school for many years, and here his Christian influence shows clearly.

The deceased leaves besides his wife, two sons, Dr. William Law and Frank Law of Syracuse, and one daughter, Miss Edna Law of this village. He is also survived by his aged father, Mr. William Law of Vernon, and one sister, Mrs. Lewin of Vernon Centre.

BAPTIST PASTOR DEAD.

Rev. Isaac Kellogg Brownson Buried at Fayetteville.

Fayetteville, Jan. 30.—(Special.)—The funeral of Rev. Isaac Kellogg Brownson took place this afternoon, Rev. H. B. Williams, pastor of the Baptist Church, officiating.

Mr. Brownson was born in the town of Fenner, Madison County, July 6, 1810. He was graduated from Madison (now Colgate) University in 1838 and for one year after pursued his studies in the theological department of the same institution.

In July, 1838, he received an appointment and commission as a missionary from the Baptist Home Missionary Society for Central Ohio.

After his ordination, which took place at Peterboro, N. Y., he left for his Western work in what was then the far and wild West. He continued his labors in that State until 1847.

Turning his face homeward, he came to New Woodstock and began his pastorate there and remained until 1852. Twice afterward he went West and took up pastoral work, and in 1861 he began his labors again in New York State with a small church at Georgetown, and it was while there that his only child, a son of 21 years, was drowned while bathing. His last pastorate was at Sherburne.

In 1840 Rev. I. K. Brownson was married to Esther C. Payne, who died in 1846. On May 13, 1850, he was married the second time to Mercy W. Witherbee at Cambridgeport, Mass., and her death occurred in 1890. For some years Mr. and Mrs. Brownson kept a private school at New Woodstock.

For the past thirty years Mr. Brownson has been a resident of this village and was always active in church and village affairs. He was a man of considerable poetic fancy and has often contributed to the pleasure of an occasion by one of his poems.

In the death of this man the Baptist denomination loses a deep thinker, a good scholar and a noble defender.

Farewell to 1888.

The languishing year is growing old,
Only one day more its breathing can hold;
Then it glides to the dim, forgotten past,
Where the years untold shall gather at last.

As we look backward and stand face to face
With its joys and its sorrows commingled with grace/
Whether smiles or tears, we scarcely can tell,
Should spring from our hearts as we say farewell

Through weeks, months and years how swiftly we've sped
From childhood to age on time's restless tide;
The crowds of humanity holiday keep,
The young raise their shouts, the old fall asleep

First bud, then blossom, then fading away—
Thus does humanity bloom and decay:
Some toiling for bread, some anxious for gold,
"We spend our years as a tale that is told."

The tale grows historic as we pass on,
Grander and more than in years that have gone
Hope calls us to banquet, and soothes our fear
So welcome thy coming, thou "Happy New Year!"

Are cycles of Time prophetic of day
When vanity passes from earth away;
When from all corruption and death set free
The ransomed of earth shall keep jubilee?

Just Drop a Line to Mother

By Dan Nicholas Steidle, Jr.

Just drop a line to mother, boy; remember she's your friend;
You know she's getting old and gray and hastening toward the end.
A word from you will cheer her up and make her old heart glad;
She'd know you've not forgotten her—drop her a line, my lad.

When you were but a little child she'd stroke your curly head
And tell you how she loved you; don't forget the words she said.
She'd put her arms around your neck whenever you felt sad;
[illegible] today—drop her

You took your sorrows all to her, she'd smooth the troubled brow;
She always chased the clouds away—would you forget her now?
She's praying for you every day, no word from you she's had;
A message now would make her smile—drop her a line, my lad.

Perhaps she thinks you are lost and gone; that she is all alone;
Brighten her up with a little note as reward for what she's done;
'Twould lengthen her years to see your face she'd remember her little tad;
But this is the least that you can do—drop her line, my lad.

You'll only have one mother, [illegible] one place can take;
'Twill be too late when she is [illegible]
